Statistics show that there are 250,000 Swedes in Minnesota, nearly one quarter of the population.

Mary Anderson will soon be on a bust in England. One of the first sculptors of that country will shortly produce her in marble.

There is a chance for some one to make money in Texas. The governor of that state offers a standing reward of $500 for every train-wrecker shot in Texas.

The uncertainty of the ballot is quite as wretched as the uncertainty of the weather. Bets in Washington, almost up to the last hour of the contest for the speakership, were in favor of Randall.

General Grant is bound to keep himself solid with the old soldiers. He has headed the subscription for General Fremont's benefit, with $1,000. This is the largest charity donation the general ever made.

Success always brings trouble to the democrats. Victory is coupled with embarrassment in their case, as they will be held responsible for the work of the present session of congress, they will have to show more wisdom than ever before if they save themselves from going to the wall.

The president's message was not delivered to congress on Monday as has been the custom heretofore. It will be read to-day and will appear in full in the Gazette on Wednesday. It is a document which is usually long and dry, as it is mostly filled with statistical matters gathered from the reports of the heads of the various departments of the government. The recommendations that usually foretell the policy of the administration, will be the most important feature of the message.

The Chicago Journal came to us today in its usual good dress, not the least scared by the fire on Saturday. Although its office was destroyed, nothing being saved but the library and the press, it came out full-size on Monday and looking as natural and as newsy as ever. The old reliable Evening Journal can not be crushed by being burned out. Three times has its office been laid in ashes, but it kept on with its daily issue all the same, and to-day has more of public confidence and success than ever. The press of the northwest will be glad to know that the Journal was not crippled by the fire.

Postmaster General Gresham has at last hit upon a plan which he thinks will crush the lotteries. In his annual report he takes time to say: "I recommend the passage of an act providing that every newspaper which contains an advertisement of a lottery, or any agency thereof, shall be excluded from the mails, and rendering the person who deposits it for sending by mail liable to all penalties, etc., etc." Mr. Gresham seems to be in earnest, but it can be as well stated now as well as at any other time, that congress will not enact any such a law.

The river and harbor bill last year wiped out the republican majority in the house of representatives. It was an outrage on common political honesty because there were too many jobs and trades connected with the bill. Of course the $18,000,000 was not needed for the river and harbors, and congress knew it. The secretary of war, up to last June, had a reserve of the river and harbor fund of over $10,000,000, and yet no harbor or no river was neglected. Contractors and public officials directly interested in handling some portion of the river and harbor funds, feel worse about the economy of the secretary of war than any one else.

Mr. Tilden has never gained the reputation of being a philanthropist. He has never made any substantial or important gifts to charities, and has never given any of his means to educational purposes. His wealth runs into the millions. He has no family and very few heirs. His income is princely. With all his riches he has never consecrated any portion of them for the benefit of poor young men who are worthy and are struggling for an education. But at the age of 70, with his health in bad condition, and with no mood to enjoy the luxuries of Gramercy Park, he has determined to present his beautiful home and his magnificent library to the city of New York. The Gramercy Park home is worth about one million dollars, and is well adapted for a public library building. His books and engravings are worth about $100,000, the library being one of the very best private libraries in the country. The old man wants to follow the wise example of Peter Cooper, John Jacob Astor, and Mr. Lennox, and in his life-time do some generous and philanthropic act. The country will be glad to hear that Mr. Tilden is admonished by the weight of years that it is about time to make his riches perform a great public service.

The public is beginning to find out that it doesn't know where to find Henry Ward Beecher on every important question. Awhile ago he said he was a republican, but in the same breath said the republican idea of protection was degrading and injurious to the working men. His latest utterance on important public question is regarding polygamy. He says that part of Mormonism is not worth bothering with. He thinks it will come out all right if people will let it alone. The government has let it alone for many years, and it is still spreading and is taking deeper root than ever. The curse is more defiant than it was a dozen years ago, and has become so because the government is not inclined to take strong enough measure to suppress it. The Mormons in Utah are living in defiance of the laws of the United States. That defiance has been practiced for a number of years. Their crimes are notorious. The government has virtually let them alone. By being let alone they have flourished and have become a disgrace to the country. Under Mr. Beecher's plan they would continue to flourish and commit the crimes that have shamed the United States and astonished the people of the old world. If other criminals are punished why not polygamists, who are just as shocking to the moral sense of society as robbers or counterfeiters? The voice of Mr. Beecher will not be taken as the sentiment of this country.

CARLISLE'S KEY-NOTE.

The National Legislature Gets to Work Again.

A Conservative Policy Outlined by the New Speaker.

Too Much Talk Over the Organizations Delays the President's Message---Proceedings in the Senate---Caucuses---Nuggets.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 4.—The first session of the Forty-eight congress was opened in the presence of the largest audience ever gathered on a similar occasion in the capitol. Old residents of the city say they never saw such a crush.

The senate was called to order by President pro tem Edmunds. Prayer was offered, after which the president laid before the senate credentials in relation to Beck to succeed himself, Palmer, Ferry and Pike to succeed Rollins. The oath was administered to Beck, Bowen, Cullom, Dolp and Ferry, whose credentials were submitted at the last session of the house.

The customary resolutions notifying the house and president that the senate was ready to proceed to business was agreed to, and a recess was extended to 3 p. m.

Proceedings in the House.

At 12 o'clock McPherson began with the call of the roll in the house. The representatives of the state of Mississippi having been reached, the clerk said he wished to make a statement as to his failure to put upon the roll the name of any representative-elect from the Second district. The reason was that no paper which could be considered a certificate of election in the sense of the law had been presented him. Chalmers had filed four exhibits in support of his claim, but neither individually nor collectively did the exhibits afford the clerk sufficient authority for the enrollment of Chalmers. If the governor of Mississippi had issued a certificate of the election of any one it had not been presented to the clerk. In regard to the First district of North Carolina, the clerk had not received a certificate as to the successor of Poole, deceased. The roll-call disclosed 316 members.

Nominations for speaker being in order, Geddes said: "I nominate for speaker of this house, the Forty-eighth congress, Carlisle, of Kentucky, a man acknowledged to be preeminently qualified for the place. Cannon presented the name of Keifer, of Ohio, and Lyman the name of Robinson, of Massachusetts.

Morrison, Tucker, Reed, and Calkins were appointed tellers. The clerk proceeded to call the roll, with the following result: Carlisle, 191; Keifer, 112; Robinson, 2 (James and Lyman); J. S. Wise, Virginia, 1 (York); Wadsworth, New York, 1 (Ochiltree); Lacey, Michigan, 1 (White, of Kentucky).

The clerk declared Carlisle elected. Randall and Keifer escorted the gentleman to the chair. Their entrance into the chamber was the signal for loud and long-continued applause. The oath of office was then administered.

Upon taking the chair Carlisle said:

Gentlemen of the house of representatives: I thank you sincerely for the high honor conferred upon me by the vote just taken. To be chosen from the membership of a body like this to preside over its deliberations is a distinction upon which any citizen may properly congratulate himself, and I assure you your kindness is fully appreciated. At the same time I realize the fact that the position which you have assigned me is one of very great labor and responsibility, and while profoundly grateful for this manifestation of your confidence, I shall enter into the discharge of its duties with a serious distrust of my capacity to meet in an acceptable manner the requirements of the office. I promise, however, to devote to your service all the zeal and ability with which I am possessed. Gentlemen, the maintenance of order on the floor is absolutely essential to an intelligent and systematic transaction of the public business, and I earnestly invoke your assistance in the enforcement of the rules adopted to govern our proceedings. The large addition to the membership of the house resulting from the late apportionment, makes this duty even more difficult than before, and without your cordial co-operation and support I cannot reasonably hope even to discharge the ordinary daily duties of the office. That you will cheerfully co-operate with me in every proper effort to preserve order and facilitate the business of legislation I have no doubt. But, gentlemen, I shall ask something more than mere co-operation in the discharge of my duty. Assuring you of my earnest desire to be at all times just and impartial, still I cannot expect to avoid mistakes, and shall be compelled, therefore, frequently to rely on your friendly forbearance, gentlemen, on both sides of the house. I am sure, gentlemen, that all matters of legislation presented to this congress will receive from you such careful consideration as the magnitude of their character and interests involved require, and that your action upon them will be wise, conservative, and patriotic.

Sudden and radical changes in the laws and and regulations affecting the commercial and industrial interests of the people ought never to be made unless imperatively demanded by some public emergency, and, in my opinion, under the existing circumstances, such changes would not be favorably received by any considerable number of those who have given serious attention to that subject. [Applause.] Many reforms undoubtedly are necessary, and it will be your duty, after a careful examination of the whole subject in all its bearings, to decide how far they should extend and when and in what manner they should be made [Applause.] If there be any who fear your action on this or any other subject will actually be injurious to any interest or even afford reasonable cause for alarm I am quite sure they will be agreeably disappointed.

The members-elect were then sworn in by the speaker, except Peters, of Kansas, to whose taking the oath Springer objected, and he stood aside.

After the other members had been sworn in Springer, of Illinois, presented a memorial from the governor and other officers and a number of citizens of Kansas, claiming that under the constitution and laws of Kansas, Mr. Peters was ineligible. He desired to have the memorial printed in the record, and would offer a resolution referring the memorial to the committee on elections when appointed. He would then withdraw his objection to Mr. Peters being sworn. Mr. Peters was then sworn in.

Converse, of Ohio, rose to a question of high privilege, and asked that the certificate of election issued by the governor of Mississippi to Van. H. Manning, as representative from the Second district of that state be read. Keifer said Manning had filed with the clerk of the house a statement that he had never accepted the certificate, and had put on file with the clerk a statement that he was beaten by 900 votes, and that he would not be sworn in. Was it proposed to force him in against his will?

Converse asked that the certificate be read, and it was read.

Calkins, of Indiana, asked that the papers filed with the clerk by Mr. Chalmers be read. He claimed that there was a certificate by the secretary of state given to John R. Chalmers.

Belford, of Colorado, desired to call the attention of the Democratic side to a precedent. He came to the Forty-fifth congress with a certificate from the governor and backed by a majority of 2,700 honest votes. His competitor, knowing they had a vast majority and expecting to be seated by partisan partiality, came here and opposed his admission, and he was sent to the committee on elections. If the Democrats were honest then, let them be honest now.

Converse, of Ohio, then offered a resolution stating that Manning held the certificate in due form, and that he immediately qualify without prejudice to the final right to the seat. On this he demanded the previous question, and the yeas and nays were ordered. The previous question was ordered—yeas, 163; nays, 128.

Calkins, of Indiana, offered a resolution referring the certificates of the governor, the certificate of the secretary of state, and other papers to the committee on elections, to report as soon as practicable on the prima facie rights in the case, without reference to the final determination of the rights of the contestants.

Pending action on this latter motion, the house, on motion of Cox, of New York, at 3:40 p. m. adjourned.

At 3 o'clock the house, not having completed its organizations, the senate adjourned.

The president's message will be read this afternoon, probably.

For the Speaker.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 4.—The most unique among the many floral designs presented to members of the house was the one which two Kentucky ladies had prepared for the successful candidate for speaker from their state, an entirely original design in flowers and hand-painted satin, and sent it to him at the house. It is a gavel in the shape of a George Washington hatchet, which rests upon the mossy stump of a tree in such wise as to leave both sides of blade and handle entirely exposed. One side is of exquisite flowers, and the other of satin finely painted in oils by an artist of talent who originated the design for the decoration, the inscriptions being composed by one of the donors. Through the centre of the blade appears, in illuminated letters, in old English text, on white satin:

May eye be keen as the blade of a hatchet,
When worthy members rise to catch it;
And rulings true as steel to match it,
All lawful business to dispatch it.

On the left of the inscription is the trump of fame, blowing out gavels, and beneath it, on the left, is a little nude George Washington, hatchet in hand, cutting down a cherry tree. On his right are a large hatchet and a felled tree. In the upper left-hand corner appears, against a sky back ground, the dome of the capitol, with a waning moon in the west and a rising sun in the east. In the centre part of the handle, on a white satin ribbon, apparently twined about it, is in German text: "G. W. To the speaker XLVIII. Congress, Greeting," and below that is painted a large mallet. The hatchet on which all this is painted is the size of hatchets in common use.

On the card of the ladies who sent this appears the following advice to the speaker as to how to wield the double-ended instrument:

For noise use hammer end as gavel,
And blade when knots you can't unravel.

The Senate Caucus.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 4.—A report was circulated at the capital that the object of the caucus of the Republican senators, called for was the reorganization of the senate committees. A reporter inquired of Senator Ingalls, of Kansas, what would be done in the caucus. He said: "It is merely for the purpose of determining what course is to be taken in the reorganization of the senate, and not for the purpose of reorganizing the committees.

"Then the committees are not to be reorganized now?" inquired the reporter. "I think the committees and the whole senate organization will be rearranged at the same time," he replied.

"Will the absence of Senator Anthony interfere with the re-organization?" "Oh no; we can re-organize without him, and without Senator Cameron. The Democrats will not interfere under the circumstances."

"Then you think the senate will be reorganized throughout?" "Yes, sir; and we intend to fix a time and arrange for it at the caucus, if possible."

Democratic Caucus.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 4.—At the Democratic caucus Monday night the question of distributing the patronage, was deferred until a future meeting. The caucus agreed to adopt the rules of the Forty-seventh congress, to remain in force until two weeks after the new committee on rules shall have been appointed. Two hours were spent in discussing the Manning-Chalmers Mississippi election case, and a resolution offered by Willis, of Kentucky, which was substantially the same as the one offered in the house by Calkins, of Indiana, was adopted. It was also decided to postpone action looking to permanent organization until the meeting of the next caucus. The session was not altogether harmonious.

New and Dangerous Counterfeit.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 4.—The secret service division of the treasury have received specimens of a very dangerous $5 counterfeit gold coin, bearing date of 1863, and which is believed to be in circulation in Chicago and western cities.

Work of the Mints.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 4.—During the month of November the various mints coined 8,583,500 pieces of silver, representing an aggregate value of $5,824,310. During the past week 343,480 standard silver dollars were put in circulation by United States mints.

Authorized to Recommence.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 4.—The Exchange National bank of Hastings, Neb., has been authorized to recommence business with a capital of $100,000.

Three Children Burned to Death.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—A fire which caused a loss of $7,000 occurred in four tenement houses known as Central Park terrace on West Fifty-fourth street. The buildings were occupied by forty-eight colored families. After the flames had been extinguished it was found that three children named Hattie Jackson, aged 3, Mabel, aged 2 years and Edgar aged 8 months were burned to death. All were burned to a crisp. The mother of the children left her apartments to go on an errand, a few minutes before the fire was discovered.

For the Bartholdi Pedestal.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—The opening ceremonies of the art loan exhibition in aid of the fund for the erection of the pedestal for the Bartholdi statue, took place at the National academy of design. The Hon. Wm. M. Evarts presided and received the collection on behalf of the citizens, and made an earnest appeal for money. Gen. Grant then declared the exhibition open. The attendance was very large.

Not at all Dead.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Dec. 4.—Lieut. Julius Payer, the Austrian Arctic explorer whose death was reported in the Associated Press dispatches, is now residing in this city. He is in robust health and bids fair to survive many similar announcements.

DISASTERS AT SEA.

Unknown Pilot Boat Run Down by the Steamer Alaska.

Twelve Men Lost in Sight of the Crew and Passengers---Wreck of a New Vessel on the Nova Scotia Coast.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—The Union steamer Alaska reached her dock, her hitherto irreproachable record marred by a terrible disaster, in which nearly a dozen lives were lost. Twelve hours before, buffeted by a heavy northwest gale, she had exchanged signals with a pilot boat. The latter came spinning up on the steamer's port bow, and was just lowering her yawl in order to send a pilot on board the big steamer, when somebody's fatal blunder caused her to get in front of the sharp steel plow. The steamer whirled the pilot boat and yawl over in a twinkling, and crushed through them as though they were egg-shells. The wreck drifted past the Alaska's stern, and was caught in the whirlpool made by her reversed propeller, and was sucked out of sight. Not one man on board the helpless craft was left alive to tell the tale. The details of this disastrous collision were collected with extreme difficulty, as the officials of the Guion line and of the steamer pursued the policy of silence. Mr. C. B. Russell, of Cleveland, was a passenger on the Alaska, and he made the following statement: "Myself and three other gentlemen were watching the pilot boat which came along side about two miles off Fire island, when the next we knew there was a fearful sound of crushing timber and a slight jar perceptible on the steamer, accompanied by such shrieks of terror as I shall never forget, and a moment later, looking over the rail, we were horrified at seeing a boat bottom up, to which several men were clinging, float past us, and behind it a solitary swimmer, who flung his arms into the air and cried out: 'For God's sake save me! For God's sake, save me! Save me for my family's sake!' Just as he passed under the stern of the Alaska we heard the bells to reverse engines. The big propeller whirled, and the man was sucked out of sight. I could hear his gurgling cry as he went down, the most awful sound that ever entered my ears. When this man was beneath me I saw him with perfect plainness. He had dark-gray whiskers. He might have been saved easily if a rope or buoy had been thrown him at once. I am certain of this, and the three gentlemen who were with me will bear me out in every statement I make. I say," continued Mr. Russell with great earnestness, "that this man might have been saved if the officers of the Alaska had been equal to the emergency. But they were paralyzed with fright. Not an officer nor a seaman did his duty. I make these charges solemnly, and I am prepared to substantiate them. It was three minutes after the man was sucked under, and the wreck had passed out of sight astern, when a lighted buoy was thrown overboard. And it was twelve minutes—I timed it with my watch—before the boat was lowered. There was not a sailor engaged at that work who had a knife to cut away the necessary rope, and they actually had to apply to the steward for one. When, finally, the boat was lowered, it only made a pretense of a search. Those who manned it were afraid to venture far away from the steamer."

Driven On the Rocks.

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia, Dec. 4.—The newly-built government steamer, Princess Louise, was successfully launched on Saturday from the ship-yard of Jotham O'Brien, at Maccan, and a St. John steam-tug taking her in tow proceeded to Wood point to place her under the care of the dominion steamer Newfield, Capt. Guilford. Here a new steel wire tow-line was adjusted and the two vessels got under way for Halifax. On board the Princess Louise were Capt. Daniel Browne, superintendent of light house, and a crew numbering eight men and one boy, the latter being an assistant of the Newfield's steward. The work of towing proceeded without mishap until early in the morning. A severe gale prevailed, the wind blowing with extreme violence, snow falling heavily, and a rough sea running. About a quarter to 4 the two ships were passing about a mile below Digby gut, when the wire hawser, strained severely by the continual pitching of the vessels, suddenly snapped. Capt. Browne, at the wheel of the Princess Louise, could see a short distance away the light on Point Prim. Aware that it was impossible to prevent the vessel from running ashore, he attempted to head her for a less dangerous part of the shore than that toward which she was being fast driven, but the great gale raging was too much and the efforts to change her course were useless. She was carried directly against a square bluff rock, striking with great violence, and immediately keeled over on her side. Waves of great size began at once to sweep over her, carrying everything before them, and soon all those on deck, including Capt. Browne and seven others, were swept into the sea and drowned. James Doane, the boy belonging to the Newfield, and James Sol, a seaman engaged at Maccan, were below at the time, and, staying there until after the tide had receded, they lowered themselves by a rope over the side and safely reached the shore. Outside of Capt. Browne, most, if not all, of those on the wrecked vessel were shipped at Maccan. The names of three of the victims are unknown. The others were: Capt. Daniel Browne, married; John McKenzie, married; Jacob Singer, married; Harry Gray, unmarried; Arthur, unmarried.

The Princess Louise now lies in pieces, having held together but a short time after striking the shore. The vessel was worth about $40,000, and, after being rigged at this port, was to have been taken to England to have machinery and boilers put in.

JULIAN'S REMINISCENCES.

POLITICAL RECOLLECTIONS. 1840 to 1872. By George W. Julian. Chicago: Jansen, McClurg & Co.; for sale in Janesville by Stebbins and Sons'. Cloth, 8 vo., pp. 334; price, $1.50.

Hon. George W. Julian is widely known throughout the country, he having been during most of the period named in the title a conspicuous figure in American politics. One of the earliest and most uncompromising of the anti-slavery leaders, the candidate for vice-president upon the free soil ticket in 1852, one of the founders of the republican party in 1856, and afterwards one of its most prominent and trusted leaders, a member of congress during the exciting period preceding and including the war, and during that great struggle one of President Lincoln's intimate advisers, and a member of the famous congressional committee on the conduct of the war, —he is well able, from such a career, to make of his recollections a most interesting and thrilling narrative. His style as a master of vigorous English is well known, and the tone is personal throughout, giving to the work abundant piquancy and point. Censures and criticisms are freely dealt, and the author's impressions and knowledge of famous men and movements are given with unreserve admissible only after the lapse of time. With the present keen desire for definite information concerning events connected with the war and its political causes, Mr. Julian's narrative will find hosts of eager readers, among friends and enemies' and he has an abundance of both. An excellent index greatly adds to the value of the work.

RAWLINS'

BACK SUPPORTING

Shoulder Braces.

A varied experience amongst Children and growing Girls as Teacher and medical attendant, lead Miss Emma J. Rawlins, the inventor of this BRACE, to believe that stooping shoulders and most spinal affections among Girls arise from the following causes: Debilitated muscles, owing to a lack of free and unrestricted exercise such as is allowed their brothers, of bad positions in standing and sitting.

This Brace affords a firm, yet gentle, SUPPORT TO THE BACK, at the same time drawing the shoulders backwards and downwards, expanding the chest and giving a healthy and graceful position.

STORY OF A CRIME.

Salmon, the Laconia, New Hampshire, Murderer Confesses.

He Says His Hands Are Red With the Blood of The Murdered Ones. Against Whom He Had No Ill Feeling.

LACONIA, N. H., Dec. 4.—Thomas Salmon sent for Sheriff Story and E. P. Jewell, Esq., and made a full confession of the terrible tragedy which so horrified this community a week ago. He stated that Saturday morning Mrs. Ford came to his room and asked for lager. Both had drank heavily the day before. He refused her. Other words followed and he threw her on the floor and put his foot on her breast. She never spoke, and soon died. He felt mad and discouraged, but had not thought of killing her. He then went about the house bewildered, not knowing what to do with her or himself. He tried to put her into a box, but it was too small. He then took a trunk and cut her knees to get her in. She did not bleed any, and he did not wash the axe. He then went down street, returned, and in an hour dragged the trunk down stairs, put it on a wheelbarrow, and started off, intending to dispose of the body and drown himself. On the road it occurred to him to go to Ruddy's house to which he expected to move in a day or two. He had no thought of harming them. On reaching there he left the trunk outside, had some conversation with Mrs. Ruddy, went down town, went back to Ford's, carried some things over to Ruddy's in a pail, and thought he would get up in the morning and bury the trunk somewhere. Then he took the trunk into the house, ate supper with the Ruddys, then took off his coat and laid down in the room with the trunk while the Ruddys went to bed in the front room. He could not sleep, and grew constantly worse. He could not sit down or walk. Did not know what to do with himself. Would go out, come in and walk around in the house. Ruddy's folks finally got up between 12 and 1 o'clock. Mrs. Ruddy made him some tea. Ruddy sat up with him. Did not intimate to Ruddy what the trouble was. About 3 o'clock it occurred to him that he might kill them all and burn the house. That very moment he seized a hatchet and struck Ruddy, killing him instantly. Mrs. Ruddy ran out, he grabbed at her and struck her with the hatchet. She screamed. The child was screaming also. He took it out of bed, but did not remember cutting it. (The child was found dead with his head nearly severed from the body). Then he chopped open the trunk, turned Mrs. Ford's body out on the floor, pulled the beds around, poured on kerosene, set it on fire and ran into the street. He then went to Fords, but found the door bolted, and then started for Plymouth. Did not hear the fire bells, and never knew the house was not burned until Mr. Jewell told me so. Had no hard feelings against Mrs. Ford or the Ruddys. The murderer denied making the incision in Mrs. Ford's leg which appeared to have been made for the purpose of bleeding, and denied throwing the hatchet into the river. He said he put the hatchet where he found it. The news of the confession spread like wildfire, and the streets were thronged with people eager for the latest intelligence. Salmon will be speedily arraigned and held for the supreme court in March. There are renewed threats of lynching.

HER FIGHT FOR LIFE.

A Struggle Between Man and Wife Which Lasted an Hour.

FRANKLINVILLE, N. Y. Dec. 4—On Saturday Charles Clark, a young farmer, brutally murdered his wife, mutilating her terribly. Clark is about 30 years old and his wife 24. They had not been living together for some time, and on Saturday Mrs. Clark went to her husband's house, which is on her father's farm, to get some articles belonging to her. Clark, who had been drinking hard, found her there. Details of their meeting are unknown, but the woman's appearance indicates that she fought desperately for life, and that the struggle must have lasted an hour. She was shot in the back and in the head and her throat was cut. Clark escaped. The whole population is out in pursuit of him.

Charged With Inhumanity.

ERIE, Pa., Dec. 4.—W. Brown, superintendent of the county alms-house, has been arrested, charged with inhumanity to Mrs. Thompson, visiting Julia Hill, a dying consumptive girl. Julia Hill had taken a notion to make her own shroud and begged the lady to purchase the material necessary. Mrs. Thompson did so and while showing Julia how to cut out the shroud, she alleges that she was seized by the superintendent and struck senseless. Brown denies the allegation and says the woman was intoxicated, disturbing the patients and dangerously exciting the dying girl. He has always been considered a kind and humane guardian.

Will Not Sign the Iron-Clad.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 4.—The oil cloth printers connected with the works of Thomas Potter's Sons & Co. and George W. Blabon & Co. still refuse to sign the iron-clad agreement prepared by the firms that they will not become members of any labor organization. The employes to the number of 220 who are in the movement have had several meetings and are fully determined not to yield to the stipulations of the two firms.

Another Hyphenated Journal.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 4.—The evening Telegraph company has purchased The Evening Chronicle, of this city, and after the first of January, the united papers will appear as The Chronicle-Telegraph. The proprietors of The Telegraph will have entire control of the new paper, and will possess the leading afternoon paper of western Pennsylvania. It is understood the price paid for The Chronicle was $50,000.

Deny the Report.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 4.—Officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad company deny the report that that corporation intends to lease the New York, West Shore & Buffalo line. They say that the company has a satisfactory traffic contract with the West Shore road, but that there is no intention either to purchase or form any other alliance with it, or to enter further into competition for the New York trade.

The Man Who Beat Charles Francis Adams.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—Stevens, alias Fat Jack, arrested in this city a few days ago for confidence operations, turns out to be the rogue who swindled Charles Francis Adams out of $80,000 in checks and notes about a year ago. The thieving fraternity of Chicago is trying to save him from punishment.

Beaten Nearly to Death.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—James Lyall, a Scotch laborer, was called out of his room on Twenty-seventh street by three unknown men, beaten and left for dead. His wife reported the occurrence to the police. Lyall was taken to the hospital. He will probably die from his wounds.

Perfect Success.

Those two words have vast meaning when fully comprehend. A perfect success can be truthfully applied to Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic, which cures dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, all diseases of the kidneys, liver and bladder. It is a perfect tonic and blood purifier; it keeps the skin clear and bright, drives away pimples and makes the general health excellent. Price 50 cents. of Stearns & Baker.

A Druggist's Story.

Mr. Isaac C. Chapman, druggist, Newburg, N. Y., writes us: "I have for the past ten years sold several gross of DR. WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I can say of it what I cannot say of any other medicine. I have never heard a customer speak of it but to praise its virtues in the highest manner. I have recommended it to a great many cases of Whooping Cough, with the happiest effects. I have used it in my own family for many years; in fact, always have a bottle in the medicine closet ready for use."

Papillon Skin Cure, Papillon Catarrh Cure, Papillon Cough Cure, manufactured by the Papillon Manufacturing Co. of Chicago, Ill., and advertised in this paper is for sale by Palmer & Stevens and Prentice & Evenson.

The most delicate persons enjoy taking Emory's Little Cathartic Pills, give a wholesome appetite, put new life in a broken-down body.—15 cents.

For the first time in eleven years the dance halls at Dodge City are closed, and Mayor Deger intends to swear in enough extra police to keep them closed.

Sigmund Vogel, a clothing-dealer at Mobile, made a sale of his stock to friends to cover indorsements, leaving creditors to the amount of $30,000 in the lurch. He died of congestion of the brain later.

The governor of Pennsylvania holds that members of the legislature are entitled to compensation for only fifty days, and he will probably veto the appropriation of $457,000 for the extra session.

Joseph Lahnstein, a cotton buyer of Dallas, Texas, has been arrested for frauds and forgeries amounting to $100,000. It is claimed that he operated in collusion with a freight agent at Sherman who recently absconded.

The sausage factory of A. Heller, in Astor street, Milwaukee, was damaged to the amount of $25,000 by fire. Chief Engineer Foley, of the fire department, narrowly escaped being killed by a falling weather vane weighing 100 pounds. A loss of $50,000 was incurred at Burlington, Iowa, by a fire in the Governor's building, corner of Main and Valley streets.

The difficulties created by the disastrous fire of Saturday evening, which wrecked the entire office, must have been great, but the enterprising publishers of The Chicago Journal surmounted them, and to the satisfaction of presenting their paper, at the usual hour, without change of form or appearance, to the patrons who for so many years have been familiar with both.

THE HICKMAN, KY., TRAGEDY.

Arrest of a Man Thought to Be the Murderer of the Kings.

HICKMAN, Ky., Dec. 4.—A negro man, Columbus Clark, has been arrested and is held at Troy, Tenn., charged with the killing of King and his wife. It is rumored that the hatchet used in breaking the trunk has been identified by Dick Harrison, a butcher of Union City, as his, and that this hatchet and some other butchers' tools were missing at the same time, and about the time Clark left Harrison's employ. Clark was tried at Troy for the theft of these tools, but the result of the crime is unknown here as yet. Few people here believe Clark guilty of the crime, though he has served one term in the Kentucky penitentiary for cutting with intent to kill. News comes from Obion that Clark is held at Troy in the court house under strong guard, and fears are entertained there of Kentucky mob violence. Few, if any, at Troy believe that Clark did the deed, and are afraid of Kentuckians letting their passion master their judgment. The outcome of the Clark arrest is awaited with feverish impatience by the people here and the estate of King will offer a reward of $1,000 for the apprehension and conviction of the murderer.

Its Success Is Assured.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 4.—Mr. R. S. McGarigle, secretary of the new telegraph company recently organized in this city, was in Erie last week, with a view of establishing a line between Erie and Pittsburg, with intermediate stations. He received much encouragement from the business men of Erie, and the success of the enterprise is assured.

BURNING THE BIBLES.

Religious Services at Wexford, Ireland, Dispersed by a Mob, and the Bibles Burned--Foreign Flashes.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—While religious services were being conducted in the theatre at Wexford, by Maj. Whittle, of Chicago, a Catholic mob entered the building, and made a bonfire of all the bibles and hymn-books that could be found. One Protestant was attacked and carried down to the harbor, the intention of his assailants being to drown him. Some respectable Catholics interfered and saved him. Another Protestant was chased through the streets and finally sought refuge in the police barracks. He was told the police were unable to protect him. He was seriously wounded.

The mob took complete possession of the town, broke the windows of the Protestant church; and of nearly all the houses occupied by Protestants. The dresses of the ladies who attended the services in the churches and in the theatres were torn off, and the gentlemen accompanying them stoned. Several were injured severely. The mob paraded the streets for several hours, singing "God Save Ireland."

The police were confined to their barracks throughout the riot. The victims intend to seek compensation.

Irish Items.

DUBLIN, Dec. 4.—The pastoral of Cardinal McCabe strongly denounces secret societies, which, it says, "seem to possess a fatal charm for Irishmen, ending generally with the hangman's rope or the infamy of the informer."

Father MacCartan was stoned while passing through the orange quarter of New Ryo.

A prominent Invincible undergoing penal servitude, offers to give important testimony against fourteen men whose trial begins today for the murder of Mrs. Smythe, near Collinstown, in April, 1882.

Goschen Declines.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The Right Hon. George Goschen, member of parliament for Ripon, the eminent financier and diplomat, who was offered the speakership of the house of commons, has declined the honor, explaining that his defective voice and sight unfit him for the duties of the place. It is considered probable that the position will be offered to Mr. Arthur Wellesley Peel, member of parliament for Warwick, youngest son of the late Sir Robert Peel.

Dynamite for Suez Canal Men.

PARIS, Dec. 4.—A small box, postmarked Nice, was received here by M. Couvreux, a Suez canal contractor, which exploded when opened. Fortunately no damage was done. Similar boxes were received by M. DeLesseps and several of the canal directors, but were not opened, these gentlemen having been warned.

The War in the Soudan.

CAIRO, Dec. 4.—Active preparations continue for the reopening of the road to the Soudan via Suakin and Berber. Two battalions of troops will be despatched to upper Egypt,—probably to Keneh, the capital of the province of Keneh Cossier, or Kneh, twenty-five miles south of Berber, the headquarters of the Sonnaar caravans.

Hicks Pasha's Army.

CAIRO, Dec. 4.—Letters have been received at Khartoum from Kordofan, in the province of the Soudan, within which the battle of El Obeid occurred, stating that two-thirds of Hicks Pasha's army survived the battle, and are encamped along the river Rahad.

Failures in China.

HONG KONG, Dec. 4.—Owing to the unsettled condition of trade in consequence of the relations between France and China, many native firms have failed throughout the empire, and great uneasiness exists in commercial circles.

Fugitives From Khartoum.

CAIRO, Dec. 4.—The European population of Khartoum has taken refuge at Berber. The Egyptian government has ordered the local chiefs to protect the fugitives.

O'Donnell's Execution Fixed.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The execution of O'Donnell has been definitely fixed for Monday, December 17.

Young Nutt's Trial.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Dec. 4.—Everything is in readiness for the Nutt trial, which will begin on Wednesday morning. Maj. Brown and Marshal Swartzwelder, of Pittsburg, both for the defense, are already here, and Senator Voorhees telegraphs from Washington City that he will join them. District Attorney Johnson, John Boyle and David Patterson, of Pittsburg, are the only attorneys positively known for the prosecution. It is believed that Dukes' rich step-father, Asbury Struble, has secured some able outside assistance. Emotional insanity will probably be the plea of the defense.

Suing for Their Wages.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Dec. 4.—On Saturday last a number of suits were again brought before Alderman Jones, of this city, against the Bethlehem Iron company by the former employes of the company for the recovery of money deducted from the wages of workmen for store bills, etc., without the consent of the hands. It is probable that all the cases will be appealed to court. The suits will cost between $200,000 and $300,000 if the court decides in favor of the workmen. All of the suits were brought by the discharged employes who took part in the recent strike.

The American Steamship Company.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 4.—President Henry D. Welsh, of the American Steamship company, in speaking of the line, states that the subject of devising means by which the running of the vessels can be put on a paying basis, is now under consideration. "It can positively be stated," continued Mr. Welsh, "that the American line will not be abandoned. We are simply looking around for some means by which the ships can be made to pay. The Pennsylvania railroad, which is the principal owner of the company, has been paying the losses for some years, and naturally wants a change."

Disaffection in Manitoba.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 4.—As a result of the alarming disaffection in the Manitoba tide of immigration sometime past turning from Canadian northwest to Dakota, in passing through the United States to Winnepeg, many intending settlers have been induced to remain on the other side of the international boundary, fearing to settle in a country cursed with monopolies. That it may not be necessary for emigrants to pass through the United States, the Canada Pacific company states that next spring they will transport emigrants from Montreal to Winnipeg at a rate of $10 each, via Lake Superior route.

Business Troubles.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—J. R. Morrell, storage warehouse at Thirty-second street and Fourth avenue, made an assignment. Emil Langsdorf and Louis Adler, trading as wholesale dealers in clothing under the name of E. Langsdorf & Co., at 643 Broadway, assigned. THE OLD VILLAGE DEPOT.

[J. N. Matthews in Toledo Blade.]

There stands the old station house out in the rain,
A stone's throw away from the door,
With its wind-beaten wall and its weather-racked pane,
And its rickety, rat-haunted floor;
Its sashes are seamed and its lintels are gashed
With the jack-knives of twenty long years,
And the eaves where the wings of the swallow once flashed
Are touched with the kinship of tears.

Old home! it looms up like a ghost in the gale,
And gibbers and groans in the blast,
And speaks with a weird and a wearliess wail,
Of the dim, irrepealable past.
On the old dingy platform that girdles it round,
The wealth of the prairie once poured;
And daily the carriage of commerce came down
With the wares of the merchant aboard.

'Twas here where our brothers went off to the wars,
We blessed them and bade them adieu;
And we welcomed them here, 'neath a banner of stars,
When the terrible conflict was through;
And here where the bare-footed boys are at play
The war trumpets thundered of yore—
And here came the coffins in ghastly array,
Of the dear soldier dead to our door.

'Twas here the young bride, in her beauty and bloom,
To her cheek felt the parting kiss prest;
And here beat with rapture the heart of the groom,
As he cradled her form on his breast:
And here in his squalor the mendicant crept,
To shelter himself from the blast,
In the merciless midnight, and dreamed as he slept
Of the happier days of the past.

And here came the message, more fleet than the dove,
O'er the wandering, wavering wire,
That filled us with grief, or thrilled us with love,
As we peacefully sat round the fire;
Ah! the old station house! it will soon tumble down,
Its timbers are crumbling away,
But its record is writ on the heart of the town,
And its glory abideth for aye.

THE PARISIAN PRESS.

One Thousand Five Hundred Francs a Month for One or Two Articles.

Owing to the absence of regular business buildings in Paris the newspapers are wretchedly lodged. The editorial rooms are rarely large enough to "swing a cat" in, and the composing room is generally a cellar. Most of the Parisian journals are printed in one of three great central printing works. In short, the average French journal is a comparatively cheap affair in all senses of the word. The fitting up is cheap; the amount of composition—never more than four pages, including the advertisements—is small; and the paper and ink employed are of very inferior quality. The material cost of getting out 25,000 copies of the large size Parisian four-page journal, including paper, composition, printing, gas, rent, and wear and tear, is as near as possible, 1,250 francs.

The editorial expenses are not so easy to estimate. The pay varies very much with the journals, and, owing to the custom of signing, individual writers who have acquired great celebrity are paid at exceptional rates, like famous tenors and golden-mouthed cantatrices. The regular staff of The Figaro, the most numerous, is composed of twenty-five persons. The pay of the celebrities of The Chronique, like Albert Wolff, Scholl, and Monselet, is 1,500 francs a month for one or two articles a week. The leading reporter of The Figaro receives the same sum, together with handsome traveling expenses. In short, the small journalists earn from 200 to 500 francs a month, while the leading writers—say, at the outside, twenty men—will make an average of $25,000 francs a year out of their pen. M. Francisque Sarcey, the leading dramatic feuilletoniste, receives 250 francs for each of his weekly reviews in Le Temps. The general tariff for a special article is 150 francs, and the highest price paid to the dozen leaders of the Parisian press is 250 francs. The weekly Parisian letter in The Independance Belge, which can almost be reckoned among the Parisian journals, is paid 150 francs. The price paid for the roman-feuilleton varies very considerably from 2 sous a line to 30 sous. Thirty sous a line was the price paid to Alphonse Daudet for his last novel, "L'Evangeliste," but it is altogether an exceptional figure; few writers are paid more than 8 sous.

When the Band Played "Dixie."

[Louisville Cor. Springfield Republican.]

As I write in the press-room of the exposition the place is a perfect pandemonium. Something over 15,000 children of all sizes and ages have visited the place, and their shouts are heard on all sides. They are incapable of walking, I think; but they run and yell like little demons. They come into the press-room and look over one's shoulder as he writes; they get under the railing in front of the pictures in the art gallery; they get lost and howl for impossible mothers and guardians. The floors are like the floors of pig-pens, and the air is a living shriek when the band has played anything pleasing to the infantile ear.

One incident struck me; the band never plays "Dixie" before a large crowd here, but the loud and famous "rebel yell" is heard. But to-day, when, after the 15,000 children had been shrieking their little lungs out with applause of a cornet solo, the cornetist and band played "Dixie," there was not a sound of approval. The war is over when the youngsters manage affairs. I have noticed about this "rebel yell" that it is largely raised by the non-combatants, or by people who have more enthusiasm than sensibility. An old soldier turned out of the crowd with a frown and a half-sigh the other evening as he said: "I wish they wouldn't play that tune any more; I might like to hear it in New England, but we've had enough of it in Kentucky." The southern veteran now feels a nobler poetry about the war than the simple old melody conveys.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY.

A Book of Prophecies of Future Ups and Downs in Speculative Prices.

[New York Letter in Philadelphia Press.]

A curious book is being handed about in Wall street and read with some interest. It is called "Benner's Prophecies of Future Ups and Downs in Prices; what years to make money in pig iron, hogs, corn and provisions. By Samuel Benner, an Ohio farmer." It was published in 1879 by Robert Clarke & Co., of Cincinnati, and has run through two editions. It is a small work of 130 pages, and was written apparently in 1875 or 1876, but surely before 1879.

Mr. Benner starts with the idea that to foresee the future in regard to supply and demand is the great desire of persons in trade, and he modestly expresses the opinion that it will be the "greatest boon" to his readers "to have the years of high and low prices pointed out in the future."

"Well," said an old operator at this point, as he was reading extracts from the book to a crowd of hangers-on about the ticker in an Exchange Place broker's office, "I should smile. If Mr. Benner can give us such points as that we will all buy a book, bring it down town with us and sleep with it under our pillows. He is just the man we have been looking for. I will buy up the whole edition and break Jay Gould myself."

Mr. Benner's theory is that the advance and decline in the advance of pig iron, hogs, corn and provisions are as alternately certain as the revolutions of the earth upon its axis, and the periods of high and low prices have been as regular as the annual return of the four seasons. He then inquires how a rule can be discovered which will give true results. The records of the weather will not do, statistics of productions are uncertain and unreliable, but the actual price of an article is a certain indication of a surplus or deficit in any product or commodity. It is always known, and, while temporarily it may be uncertain (as Northern Pacific preferred was on Saturday, for instance), average prices for a series of years are the true basis of speculation as to the future.

"We must look," says Mr. Benner, "to the past ups and downs of prices; ascertain how many years it takes to complete an up and down in any product, and then determine in in what order the ups and downs are repeated in the next cycle. If there is found any periodicity in the cycles, then we have a rule which can be applied to the future. An up and down or a down and up in average prices is in this book denominated a cycle."

One extreme, he continues, always follows another in nature and in business. Looking back at the pig-iron trade, he finds that, commencing with the low-priced year of 1834, the price advanced three years to 1837, declined six years to 1843, making a cycle between low prices of nine years. Again, the price advanced two years to 1845, and declined five years to 1850, making a cycle of seven years. From 1850 to 1854 there was an advancing market and then a declining one for seven years to 1861, making a cycle of eleven years. Again advancing three years to 1864 the market declined six years to 1870, a cycle of nine years, and so forth. He concludes that 1881 will be the next highest-priced year for pig iron, and the months of September and October as the periods of best figures.

The years 1882, '83, '84, '85, '86, '87 and '88, says Mr. Benner, will be years of decline in the price of pig iron, and years of depression in the business, being a repetition of the seven years from 1874 to 1881. "We proclaim it to all who may be readers of this book, and engaged in any way in the iron trade, to be prepared after the year 1881 for breakers ahead!"

Now Mr. Benner's book becomes more cheerful reading. The iron trade is to have three good years, even if people have to wait a good while. Hear the voice of the prophet: "In the years 1889, '90, and '91 the price of pig-iron will again be on an advancing scale, and will be three years in reaching the highest price in 1891. This will be a period of money-making in the iron business, and these will be three years of general prosperity in all departments of trade and industry." After 1891, the price of pig-iron will decline for six years, which will again be disastrous to business.

Indeed, in 1891 Mr. Benner predicts an awful panic, which will not be confined to the United States, but which "will sweep the world like the panics of 1819 and 1857," and, falling into Gen. Taylor's mistake, Mr. Benner says, "will be felt with equal severity in other countries." The financial earthquake will come in September or October, though the price of pig iron will not begin to decline until the former month. This shows that the panic of 1891 will be sudden, and it is well for the financial world that Mr. Benner has given such timely notice of it. He further believes that close observation will give the peculiar month and day in the future when the violent changes are likely to occur. At this time, it may be enough to say that the low priced years for pig iron will be 1888 and 1897 and the high priced years 1891 and 1899.

Mr. Bender considers the hog and cotton trades, and arrives at quite definite conclusions as to their future. Indirectly he includes in his prophecies the whole business world, for he thinks the iron market controls all other manufactures and trades.

An Introduction to Coleridge.

["Casper" in Detroit Free Press.]

It was a case of personal introduction. Everybody knows that many of the Wall street boys are given to a free-and-easy manner. The broker in the case in question is probably as free-and-easy as any. A friend, who was one of Lord Coleridge's escort, presented the broker with the information that the party of the other part was "his lordship, Chief Justice Coleridge." The broker promptly took him by the hand and said:

"How are you, Cole? Glad to see you."

His lordship's face bore a look of surprise at first, and then a smile, and his hand was withdrawn as soon as he could establish a full claim to it. And the broker hurried off to cover some shorts in New York Central, with which Mr. Vanderbilt was just then squeezing the bears.

"If I'm Spared."

[Exchange.]

A Scotchman, so goes the story, standing by the family grave, said: "There lies my gran'father and my gran'mither, and my ain father and mither, and there lies my brither Bob, and my puir girl Jeannie, and there lies my wife; and, if I'm spared, here I'll lie, too."

The English Themselves.

[London Letter.]

The most amusing and interesting things in London to an American, after all, are the English people themselves. They are as quaint and odd in their way as the relics of the remoter ancestral antiquity they are fond of showing to stangers for a fee of sixpence at the door.

Louisville Courier-Journal: Bernhardt is said to want to come to America again. She is probably only waiting for congress to increase the volume of the currency.

Diseases of an exhaustive nature that have a tendency to create an unnatural feeling such as fatigue, lassitude and great weakness throughout the system owe their origin to a lack of iron in the blood. Brown's Iron Bitters will restore the blood to its natural healthful condition. Get the blood pure by using this remedy and disease will be quickly banished.

Mr. James Lauppa, Sheboygan, Wis., says: "I used Brown's Iron Bitters for rheumatism and obtained relief."

Dr. E. B. Weathers, Elkton, Ky., says: "I regard Brown's Iron Bitters as a medicine of unusual worth."

Chronic Diseases.

A Special Study for Years.

Dr. F. B. BREWER

Has made Chronic Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Heart, Stomach. Liver, Kidneys, Nerves and Blood.

A special treatment for years. He is not a boastful, ignorant pretender, but an educated physician, seeking to do good, by devoting his talent and energies to the treatment of a class of maladies that have been with him a long and patient study. To be able to treat successfully chronic diseases it requires that a physician should be a sound, thorough scholar in the art of science and medicine generally. He should give his entire time to their study, be thorough in his investigations and have a long and varied experience. Dr. Brewer claims to work no wonders or to do any more than any well educated physician can do, who devotes his whole time to the study and treatment of chronic diseases exclusively, and has had his many years' of experience. For years Dr. Brewer has visited the the places he now visits, and has obtained his reputation by being honest in his dealings, candid in opinions and reasonable in his charges. Those who are afflicted are invited to call, investigate and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing to do so. Address all letters to —The conference of the Janesville district, of the Methodist church, is in session in the First M. E. church, this afternoon. The conference will continue until Thursday.

—A platform is to be laid on the west side of the river, just north of the railroad bridge, for the accommodation of the fire department, which will be a great benefit in obtaining water in that locality.

—There was a little excitement on Franklin street, in the neighborhood of the cotton factory this forenoon, but all were good natured, and the crowd soon dispersed. Most those all engaged were the operatives from the Monterey mill.

—"Buckwheat alley" is the now name for the alleyway between the postoffice and Britton & Kimball's furniture store. Named thus on account of the immense quantities of buckwheat and buckwheat flour shipped from Ford & Crossett's mill in the rear of the postoffice.

—This evening, (Tuesday,) at the roller skating rink, there will be given a prize to the most graceful couple on wheels. The Bower City band will furnish the music. All are invited. Admission 25 cents, and on this occasion the use of skates will be 25 cents.

—A paper from Augusta, in Eau Claire county, brings us the news of the marriage of Mrs. Olive Doty, for many years a resident of this city. She was married on Thanksgiving Day to Mr. Mark R. Fuller, of that place. The announcement will probably surprise many of her friends in this city, as it was not generally supposed that she was so near the matrimonial state.

—Mr. T. J. Laughlin, of Glendive, Montana territory, is in the city, visiting friends. Mr. Laughlin is an old Janesville boy, having spent his boyhood and school days here, and is now one of the popular conductors on the Northern Pacific railroad, with a run between Glendive and Billings, a distance of two hundred and twenty-five miles.

—The members of Water Witch engine company No. 2, are completing arrangements for the thirtieth annual festival, which will be given in the Rifles armory on Thursday evening of next week. Anderson's full orchestra has been engaged, and Messrs. John Brown, John W. Tipney, George Little and John M. Ebrlinger will manage the floor. The public is cordially invited, and all who attend will be heartily welcome.

—Janesville whisky is bad medicine for the average Beloit man; and we would advise visitors from that town to take lemonade occasionally, until they become used to the pure stuff. Sunday night Marshal Hogan took one poor inhabitant of that town in out of the cold, and this afternoon, another one—named Haywood, was found on the street in a delirious condition, and was taken in custody. Bad medicine is Janesville whisky, for Beloit boys.

—The state board of health has sent to the board of health of this city, blanks for the use of the practicing physicians, upon which are to be recorded all cases of contagious or infectious disease, required by law to be reported to the local board of health. These blanks will be found exceedingly convenient to physicians and they are requested to call at the clerk's office and supply themselves and when the blanks are filled return them to the city health officer.

—The Janesville Chautauqua circle had a full and enthusiastic meeting on Saturday last. A letter from Dr. Vincent was read, extending this hearty congratulations upon the organization of the circle, and containing words of encouragement and counsel. There will be an adjourned meeting of the circle on Friday evening, December 7th, at half-past seven o'clock, at the home of Mrs. C. T. Wright, South Jackson street, 3d door from the M. E. church. It is especially desired that the entire circle be present.

—Mrs. L. B. Moore, of Milton avenue, suffered a severe stroke of paralysis on Sunday afternoon, which came near resulting in her death. Yesterday she rallied, and was thought to be much improved, but this morning she became unconscious, and it is throught she cannot long survive. Her two sons, Drs. E. C. and W. F. Moore, of Chicago, are with her, and her daughter, Mrs. C. H. Voorhees, of Cedar Rapids, has been telegraphed, and is expected to reach Janesville this evening.

—William Hume & Co.'s sash, door and blind factory, the largest in Oshkosh, was entirely consumed by fire at five o'clock Sunday morning, together with a large ware-house and stock. Four loaded cars on a side track were also destroyed. The total loss will reach $50,000; insurance $32,000. The Paine lumber company, of Oshkosh, owned a half interest in the concern. Some years ago Mr. Hume was interested in a like business in this city, on the site of the Janesville machine company, and was burned out, when he removed to Oshkosh.

—Mr. M. D. Taylor, of Mount Hope Grant county, has accepted a position with the Janesville machine company, of this city, and has removed here with his family. The Grant County Herald, in noticing his removal, speaks of Mr and Mrs. Taylor as follows: "M. D. Taylor, our worthy townsman and enterprising mechanic in the matter of producing all kinds of iron and wood-work for the last sixteen years, now concludes to drop a flourishing business in other good hands and remove to some place where a special line of business has a more extended measure, and constructions perhaps more elaborate than are justifiable in our village and community. Mr. Taylor's natural ability and talent will warrant him in taking advantage of such opportunities. This departure of such excellent friends and neighbors from among us, meets with universal protest. I think we are pardonable for "talking about people behind their back," if it is only truth, we say, and we remember the golden rule, and in regard to these neighbors that have moved away we can truly say that in genuine accommodation to those that deserved and needed it they have never been lacking, and in all efforts and measures for the public good they were among the foremost to support or lend a helping hand in any way. And Mrs. Taylor, particularly, by extended acquaintance with everybody here from infancy, combined with so much natural willingness to do and the knowledge of "what to do," has lent a very pleasing influence in affairs connected with the prosperity of the community, and by her peculiarly sympathetic nature, although not being strong physically, she has been enabled to cause the burdens of many of the endearing ones to become much less hard to bear. May prosperity attend them in their new undertakings."

THE COTTON FACTORY.

A Demonstration at the Up-Town Mill.

There was a little demonstration at the Janesville cotton factory this forenoon, which for a time was the cause of considerable good-natured excitement. The operatives of the Monterey factory who are out on a strike, visited the up-town mill for the purpose of influencing the operatives to go out. They gathered at the Franklin street front, near the office, when they were refused admittance into the building. Several amusing scenes occurred in the streets among the operatives who were endeavoring to gain admittance into the building, but having failed they retired in as good humor as they appeared.

The mill up town was about fully manned this morning, and, notwithstanding the report of a "daily paper," the mill is now running to about its full capacity. During the demonstration in front of the factory this forenoon by the operatives from mill No. 2, (Monterey) the mill was kept running, and when the ring leader of the Monterey operatives discovered that further attempts to interfere with the business of others was useless the crowd dispersed, many of them signifying their readiness to return to work, and it was thought that a sufficient number would be on hand to start the Monterey mill this afternoon. We have no reports from Monterey since noon and can not state positively that the mill started, but such was the intention, in case a sufficient number of operatives reported for duty.

The strike is undoubtedly at an end, and all will rejoice that it was of so short a duration, and that the operatives have returned to the factories. It will also be a source of still greater rejoicing among the operatives that the time will not be very far distant when the old rates of wages will be restored, which we are assured will be the case as soon as the market will permit the directors of the mill to do so with safety.

"Oh, Mama, I've got the colic again." "Take Brown's Teething Cordial, my child. It always cures."

The Cloud Glow at Sunset.

During the past week or ten days the peculiar glow which has attended the sunsets seem to have been witnessed, throughout the eastern and western hemispheres. The cloud-glows in Europe have even attracted more attention from scientist than in this country. Our own state papers for several days have been giving notices of the beautiful sunsets in their respective localities. The State Journal says "this peculiarity has attracted attention throughout the entire country and the result of an investigation by scientists is being awaited with very pronounced expressions of interest. It is not difficult to imagine the glare, that continues long after the sun has disappeared below the horizon, coming from some awful great fire. Not only in America has the phenomenon been witnessed, but England has observed it, the only difference being that the brilliant glow lasts longer there than on this side of the water. It has been suggested that the display was due to the reflection of the sun's rays from a cloud of metoric dust. To sustain this position, it is urged the meteors have been lately seen in unusual quantities, and that the earth has just passed through the November belt of meteors."

Eastern papers have taken up the subject, and we find in the New York Tribune, of last Wednesday, this interesting notice:—"The cloud-glow at sunset last night, as seen from this city, was remarkable and beautiful, and deeply impressed all who watched it. For an hour and a quarter after the sunset gun was heard, the western sky was glowing as with the flames of a furnace sevenfold heated. The refractive condition of the atmosphere was such that tongues of fire seemed to be curling upward to a great height. Pedestrians, hurrying home, thought and said that there was a great fire in the lower part of the city. Even members of the fire petrol, experienced as they are, sent out to inquire where the great conflagration was. Remarkable sunset effects in England have been described lately in the scientific journal Nature; but the sunset of last evening as seen from New York was certainly as singular and beautiful as any mentioned in that paper. A writer in Nature suggests that it would be an interesting scientific question to determine the height of the clouds which reflect the sun's light so long after the sun itself has disappeared below the horizon."

Many in this city, who have witnessed this grand phenomenal display, were of the opinion that a heavy fire was in progress in Hanover marsh, or beyond, and thus reflected upon the clouds, and they were satisfied with this theory on account of the lateness of the hour, the sun having long been below the horizon. Perhaps, in due time, we shall have a report from some scientist, giving us the true cause of such a brilliant cloud-glow.

He Only Wanted a Night's Lodging.

The other night one of those numerous individuals common in communities at this season, and better known as tramps, waltzed up to Officer McGinley and solicited a night's lodging in the county bastile. The solicitor of free hotel accommodations at the county's expense, was well dressed and cleanly shaved. He had on a far better overcoat than that which the faithful night-watchman wore, and was generally better clothed, and in better condition to withstand the bleak December weather than McGinley. Mac fired several heavily loaded conundrums at his man, to ascertain who he was, and where he was from, but all to no purpose. He stuck to the nightwatchman for keeps, walking his beat until a late hour, importuning the privilege of securing himself a night beneath the hospitable roof of the Harper house. He seemed to be well acquainted with the "lay of the land," for ere long, he had so baffled McGinley that the two found themselves on the front steps of the jail, and Mac, it is said, had actually pulled the night bell before he realized his whereabous. The tramp, so far, had gained his point; the next was to gain possession of a bed. Mac being somewhat bewildered at thus being "led astray" by a tramp, did not quickly respond to the "who's there?" from within, but the tramp took advantage of his dilemma and drew out the required pass and was hurriedly taken in out of the cold, and the jailer bid Mc Ginley "good night." Yesterday morning Mac was obliged to take his man before the august presence of the municipal court, that he might be properly committed, and a reasonable board bill with fees presented to the supervisors for settlement. At the hour of opening court a well dressed man was seen promonading through the park, in company with McGinley, whose neat dress put Mac's uniform in the shade, and made him feel at a loss how to appear in court. Mac took an extra chew of navy plug, and braced up for the occasion. The well dressed man walked leisurely into court, followed by Mac. They took seats in the jury box, and commenced a conversation; Mac could not tell how it happened, and the well dressed man kept his own counsel; finally Mac went out to get a drink, and did not return. The well dressed man informed the court that his prisoner had left, and he guessed he would go and find him. Mac was on his beat last night, but had nothing to say concerning "runing anyone in." But that a "sly case" was in the city, and that people had better keep an eye open for him. The well dressed tramp was of the opinion that if he had come to trial, Mac would have been sent up for at least ten days, on bread and water. But Mac thinks—"Go way wid yer blarney, now."

Ran Away with a Sea Captain.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 4.—Mr. Patrick Bresnan, of Astoria, L. I., reported to the Brooklyn police that his adopted daughter Addie, aged 14, had been abducted by Capt. G. O. Gordon, a retired sea captain, aged 45, and a widower. The girl, who is large for age, and pretty, left for school as usual in the morning, but did not return in the afternoon, and a search was begun. It was found that Capt. Gordon had met the girl soon after she left home, and that they went to the house of a clergyman whom they asked to marry them. He refused on account of the child's youth, and they left the house and have not been seen since.

A Consistent Life.
[Chicago Times.]

"There is one thing that I can say," remarked the tramp, after he had finished the gratuitous reflection, "I have always been true to myself. Yes, ma'am, I have lived a consistent life, and I'm proud of it. I was born dependent—man at birth is the most dependent of animals, you know—and I've been dependent ever since."

All Colonels.
[Inter Ocean.]

The following gentlemen are colonels in the Prussian army: The czar, the emperor of Austria, the kings of Italy, Holland, Belgium, and Roumania, the prince of Wales, the dukes of Edinburgh and Connaught, and smaller fry too numerous to mention. They all get their salaries, precisely as though they actually performed duty.

A French writer claims that one cause of defective teeth is that the brain when overworked steals all the phosphates and leaves none for the teeth.

Artemus Ward's Boyhood.
[Waterford (Me.) Cor. New York Sun.]

Artemus' father died when the boy was about 13 years old, and as the family circumstances were somewhat limited thereby, he was apprenticed to Mr. J. M. Rix, who published The Coos Democrat, at Lancaster, N. H. The stage line to Lancaster ran by the Brown homestead, and the drivers were not unfamiliar with the ability of the future "genial showman" in the way of practical jokes. They knew how he organized shows, wherein his father's red cow, with a coat sleeve stuffed full of hay hanging from her nose, served as the elephant, upon which innocent country youth were invited to ride, with startling results. They knew, too, how old Deacon Hale's white horse had been induced to wander away for miles following a tempting bit of hay, hung just beyond reach by means of a lath strapped to the horse's neck.

There was an endless series of pranks gotten up by the boy to mystify the villagers in general, and his mother in particular, and all these were well known to the stage drivers. So when the young humorist started for Lancaster, eager to know as much as possible about his future residence, the veteran driver, Steve Seary, having previously conspired with the boys in Rix's office to give young Brown a fitting reception, assured him that Mr. Rix was a pious man, and that his hands were, if anything, more pious than he, and that the sooner the would-be apprentice crammed on the catechism the better. Charles listened dolefully. It was late at night when the stage reached Lancaster, and in the morning young Brown hied himself to the office. The "force" consisted of a journeyman and an apprentice named Smith. They received him solemnly. The journeyman handed him a bible and made him read a chapter, after which he was examined on the catechism. His ignorance was commented upon, but he was permitted to go to work. At noon a similar performance was enacted, while intense gloom rested on the office during the day. The next morning Charles went to the office resolved to run away at the end of the week, but, on looking about, failed to find his fellow-craftsmen. Further search revealed them under the garret stairs too intoxicated to walk. Young Brown was so angry over the sell that he wrote a note to the driver threatening vengeance, which was never carried out.

Brown's fame as a humorist was a surprise to all who knew him, and even to himself. A greater surprise to his kinfolk now is the interest still manifested in the dead merry-maker and his work. They thought that all attention would cease with his life, but every year the number of people who visit Waterford to see his mother—now almost 80 years old—increases.

Advice to Philadelphia.
[Joaquin Miller.]

Now, I am going to offer some advice. Of course I will get no thanks for it. I rarely do. Even this city, which I have discussed here, and propose to picture in this sketch exactly, may possibly be impatient with me for my work. Yet I see she is even now tearing down the fences from around her parks and giving them to the people, just as I told her to last summer. Good! but she would not admit my hand in the matter. And no matter. No matter who tears down these ugly and insolent fences all over the republic, only so that it is done. The advice? Ah, it is this: take up your cobble stones, widen your streets, you have land enough, room enough now, more than you will have a century hence when it will be impossible. And when you have carted off your cobble stones and widened your streets, then plant them in trees as Washington City has; and pave them with asphalt as Washington City has; and finally, if you possibly can raise to the spirit of it, build a few bright, airy, elegant and Pompeian-hued houses, such as now charm, invite, instruct, inspire strangers at Washington City. And ah, above all, do in pity, take up that kneeling posture, that mute and almost motionless maiden, streaming her two perpetual streams of soapsuds from your beautiful and tomblike marble doorsteps.

An Ostrich Crowing.
[San Francisco Bulletin.]

At the end of a somewhat protracted stay at the farm, a sound burst on the air which might have been the distant roar of a lion or half a dozen other strange sounds. Its like was never heard in California apart from Dr. Sketchley's ostriche's. It was an ostrich crowing. He had just gazed anew on a hollow dug in the ground in which reposed a wooden hearted "egg."

Carbolic acid, though an excellent disinfectant, is a poison, when drank, for which there is no known antidote.

"A God-Send.

The children of Israel were once fed by manna, sent from Heaven. This was an undoubted case of "God-send." The amilioration of human ills and ailments has been often undertaken, and as often failed. Ely's Cream Balm, however, "has weighed in the balance and not found wanting." It is a soverign, speedy certain, and plesant cure for Catarrh and Cold in the Head. Thousands of persons have attested this fact. "Ely's Cream Balm is a God-send," wrote Mrs. M. A. Jackson, of Portsmouth, N. H., on May 22d, 1882. "I had Catarrh for three years; had tried nearly all the remedies, but to no purpose. Two or three times a week my nose would bleed quite freely, and I thought the sores in it would never heal. Your balm has cured me." This preparation is not a liquid or a snuff, and is easily applied. Can you, reader, afford to experiment with injurious snuffs and injections when a pleasant and certain cure is at hand.
